Mother Teresa

A journalist once challenged Mother Teresa: 'You are 70 now. When you die, the world will look just the same as it did before. What will really have changed after all the efforts on your part? Without the least impatience she replied, 'you know, I have never imagined I was capable of changing the world. I have only ever attempted to be a droplet of pure water in which God's love can be reflected. Does that seem too little to you?' Then she turned again to the reporter and added, 'Why don't you also try to be a droplet of pure water? Then at least there would be two of us.'
